Speaker helps Chamber members find their "Extraordinary"

Dear Chamber Members: Hope you are doing well! In case you were not able to attend our January 18th Chamber luncheon, our speaker, Arthur Brite, delivered a thought-provoking talk about finding the "Extraordinary" we all have. We hope you will join us for future luncheon meetings where we will have equally interesting speakers with powerful messages!

The North Royalton Chamber of Commerce held their monthly meeting on Wednesday, January 18, at Carrie Cerino's Ristorante. Motivational Speaker Arthur Brite gave a presentation on "Bringing out the Extraordinary in all of us!"

Brite is not only an international keynote speaker, but a national radio talk show host, author, and national sales trainer for over 25 years. "Arthur uses his dynamic and passionate style to educate, entertain and develop highly successful people with his highly effective seminars and presentations," according to his website.

"I am a speaker, author, husband, dad and pastor," said Brite. "This is my extraordinary." He talked about ordinary people doing extraordinary things for other people. Brite was a national sales manager for a medical device company for many years. After speaking at events, he said people would question him as to why he didn't speak full time. This is something Brite always wanted to do, so he set about his goal.

Brite talks about how people usually handle their dreams or goals: they either disregard them, or jump right in, get overwhelmed and learn that they hadn't prepared. Once a person decides to pursue their dreams and goals, they should first try to visualize and commit to the goal. They should realize that there will be successes and failures and that it is a learning process. They must also commit the time and energy it will take to fulfill the dream or goal. They must take control of their lives and not compare themselves to anyone else. "It's personal," said Brite. It is important to take things, one at a time, he said. Each thing should be looked at, analyzed and then a decision can be made.

Brite talked about the 4C formula that must be present to achieve success: Commitment, Communication, Connection and Creativity. Commitment starts within, the passion about the vision. Communication allows for understanding, reduces frustration and shows respect. Connection allows people to realize that they are important and part of the team. Creativity is the result that leads to confidence and control.

He concluded with a story about a ship which was the worst in the fleet. A new captain came on the scene and talked to the sailors about things that were going on. One sailor talked about parts on the boat that needed to be replaced every six months, due to the corrosion caused by the sea water. The sailor said that they had repeatedly asked to have a better coating on the parts, but was ignored. He noted that rather than take on the lengthy task to replace them every six months, the time could be much better spent. The captain heard the sailor, and ordered the new parts to have the best coating on them. These parts only needed to be replaced every two years. The sailors went about doing more tasks, as their time had been freed up. Not only that, but the ship went on to be the best in the fleet. The sailors felt that they were heard and were a part of the ship, which let them to be more productive.
